Assignment No.1 : Financial Accounting

Name: Nikita Pratap Jandade

Division: C

Roll No.: 45

Date: 7th January 2022

Q.1 Explain Emerging Trends in Accounting

Ans → The Accountants today are modern and updated with the recent information pertaining to the ever changing market and the viable business environment. The recent trends in financial accounting are shaping the global industry and affecting the business entities that use them as well. Hence there is a need to understand the emerging trends in accounting and their effects on the current accounting practices, which are summarised as follows:

1] Inflation Accounting

- Inflation means decrease in purchasing power of money due to an increase in the general prices.
- Inflation Accounting means adjusting financial statements to show a firm's real financial position in inflationary times. It aims to indicate how rising prices and lower purchasing power of the currency affect a firm's cost of refinancing its productive assets, and of its ability to maintain an adequate level of profit on the capital employed.

- Inflation Accounting comprises a range of accounting system designed to correct problems arising from historical accounting in the presence of high inflation and hyperinflation.

* Advantages

- i Inflation accounting records fixed assets valued according to their current values then owner's capital valuation will reveal its correct value.
- ii Inflation accounting checks the misleading deeds to historical cost concepts which shows more profit and more taxes, more salaries and wages demand by employees keeping high profits in mind.
- iii The current amount of depreciation be when its charged on the current values and thus the replacement of assets will be more reasonable.

* Disadvantages

- i The system is not acceptable to income-tax authority.
- ii Changes in prices are never ending process.
- iii Too much calculations make complications.
- iv The amount of depreciation will be lower in the time of deflation.
- v The profit calculated on the system of price level accounting may not be a realistic profit.

2] Creative Accounting

- It can be described as an accounting practice that may or may not follow the accounting standards and principles. However, it deviates from the main idea of those standards and principles in order to present the desired picture of the business.
- The practice of creative accounting generally includes :
(a) overstating assets, (b) High stock, (c) Decreased Expenses, (d) changes of depreciation methods and, (e) presenting provisions as an assets.
- Creative accounting refers to imaginative ways to present accounts. It consists of accounting practices that follow required law and regulation, but deviate from what those standards intend to accomplish.

* Motives

- i) Obtaining personal gain.
- ii) Competition
- iii) Attracting Investors
- iv) Increasing or maintaining the level of capital
- v) Buying time for not settling debts.
- vi) Beating analysts forecasts about future company performances.

- In short, they aim to make their companies appear more successful and profitable than they are.

* Examples of Creative Accounting

- Property Values
- Loans
- Invoicing
- Service Contracts
- Emission

3] Environmental Accounting

- Environmental Accounting is the practice of incorporating principles of Environmental management and conservation into reporting practices and cost analysis.
- Environmental Accounting allows a business to see the impact of ecologically sustainable practices in everything from their supply chain to facility expansion.
- It is an important tool for understanding the role played by the natural environment in the economy. Environmental Accounts provide data which highlight both the contribution of natural resources to economic well-being and the costs imposed by pollution or resource degradation.
- Environmental Accounting sometimes is referred to as "Green Accounting", "Resource Accounting" or "Integrated Accounting". refers to modification of the system of National Accounts incorporate the use or depletion of natural resources.

- Environmental Financial Accounting is an important function that provides the firms with a means to incorporate information with business decision-making and business operations.
- Environmental financial Accounting is used to provide information needed by external stakeholders on a company's financial performance. This type of accounting allows companies to prepare financial reports for investors, lenders and other interested parties.

* Limitations of Environmental Accounting

- i) There is no standard accounting method.
- ii) Environmental Accounting is a long term process therefore to draw conclusion with the help of the same is not so easy.
- iii) It mainly considers the cost internal to the company and excludes the cost to the society.
- iv) Comparison between two countries of firm is not possible if the method of accounting is different.
- v) The user of information contained in environmental accounting needs adequate knowledge of process of environmental accounting.

- An environmental Accountants play a critical role within the organisation, their roles have been become more important with the organisation, their roles and responsibilities range from making environmental policies to calculating how much an organisation will spend in implementing such policies and complying with regulations.

4] Human Resource Accounting

- Human Resources are considered as important assets and are different from the physical assets. Physical Assets do not have feelings and emotions, whereas human assets are subjected to various types of feelings and emotions.
- It is the process of identifying and reporting investments made in the human resource of an organisation that are presently unaccounted for in the conventional accounting practices.
- It is an attempt to identify and report investments made in the human resources of an organisation that are not presently accounted for under conventional accounting practices.
- The system may serve both the internal and external users, providing management with relevant data on which to base recruiting, training and the other development decisions and supplying investors, lenders and other external users of the financial statement with information concerning the investment in and utilisation of human resources in the organisation.
- It is the process of assigning, budgeting and reporting the cost of human resources incurred in an organisation, including wages and salaries and training expenses.

- It is the activity of knowing the cost invested for employees towards their recruitment, training them, payment of salaries and other benefits paid and in return knowing their contribution to organisation towards its profitability.
- It means to measure the cost and value of the people in the organisation. It measures the cost incurred to recruit, hire, train and develop employees and managers.

* Objectives

- i) To monitor effectively the use of human resources by the management.
- ii) To have an analysis of the human assets i.e. whether such assets are conserved, depleted or appreciated.
- iii) To provide the means, scope and guidelines which the employees can use to develop their careers.
- iv) To cut the time of uncertainty and transition on the bare minimum by providing the information necessary for appropriate distribution of manpower and retention of valuable employees.
- v) To aid in the development of management principles and proper decision making for the future by classifying financial consequences of various practices.
- vi) In all, it facilitates valuation of human resources recording the valuation in the books of accounts and disclosure of the information of human resources in the financial statement.

- vii) To increase managerial awareness of the value of human resources.
- viii) To assisting in developing effective management practices as per the need of time.
- ix) To help in measuring producing capacity of the workers and goodwill of the company.

5) Forensic Accounting

- Forensic Accounting is a form of investigative accounting which examines financing records in order to find evidence for a law suit or criminal prosecution. It is sometimes referred to as forensic auditing.
- Forensic Accounting is the investigation of fraud or financial manipulation or top accounting scandals. Forensic Accountants are often hired to prepare for litigation related to insurance claims, insolvency, skimming fraud.
- It utilises accounting, auditing and investigative skills to conduct an examination into finances of an individual or business. Forensic Accounting provides an accounting analysis suitable to be used in legal proceedings.
- Forensic Accounting is used by the insurance industry to establish damages from claims.
- One of the key functions of forensic accounting is to explain the nature of a financial crime to the courts.

* Types of Forensic Accounting

- Financial Theft
- Securities Fraud
- Economic Damages calculations
- Post-acquisition disputes such as earnouts or breaches of warranties.
- Bankruptcy, Insolvency and Reorganisation.
- Corporate Valuation Disputes.
- Tax, Fraud or Evasion
- Money laundering
- Business Valuation and
- Computer forensic / E-discovery
- Professional Negligence claims
- Privacy Information
- Divorce Proceedings
- Defaulting on Debt.

* Advantages

- i) It can greatly help in solving financial crimes. It not only helps with gathering evidence for crimes but can also be used in detecting and identifying crimes.
- ii) It can be used to assess the work of professionals, including the accountants themselves.
- iii) Business can be used as Forensic Accounting to detect anomalies among their staff and with third parties they are working with.

* Disadvantages

- i) Forensic Accounting is not an easy process. It requires accountant to go through every piece of document to ensure that their investigation is complete and that they will cover every evidence that will solve the problem.
- ii) Because of the lengthy period of time needed forensic Accounting can turn out to be very expensive.
- iii) The forensic Accounting process can disrupt the staff's normal routine and cause their productivity and efficiency to suffer. It can affect employee morale.
