Q] Explain meaning and components of balance of payment. Discuss the causes of unfavorable balance of payment.

A] meaning of balance of payment:

The Balance of Payments (BOPs) of a country plays an important role in the trade relations of the country with the rest of the world. They help us to identify trends of trade related activities of the country that may be beneficial or harmful to the economy of the country so that the country can take appropriate measures. In simple words, Balance of Payments of a country exhibits the economic strength on the nation. Balance of payments is a systematic record of all economic transactions of the residents of a country with the rest of the world during a given period, usually a year. Thus, balance of payments is a yearly transaction statement which records all the monetary transactions that are made between the residents of a nation and the rest of the world.

- According to Bo Soderston, "Balance of payment is merely a way of listing receipts and payments in international transactions for a country."

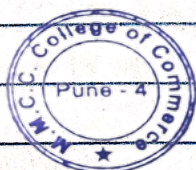

Components of balance of payment:

There are three main components of balance of payments:

① Current Account:

The current account includes export and import of both goods and services i.e., along with tangible (physical) items, it includes intangible items also. The service account includes the exports and imports of services such as insurance, transport, communication, banking, tourism, etc. Transfer payments or unilateral payments are also included in the current account. They relate to gifts, grants, charitable donations, etc. Receipt of these payments from foreign nations are entered as credits in the current account while payments ^{of} these to foreigners are entered as debits in the current account of the balance sheet. Profits, dividend, interest, etc. earned on foreign investments enter in the credit side and when foreigners earn these in the country, they are entered in the debit side of the current account. A surplus balance in current account strengthens the country's international financial position.

②

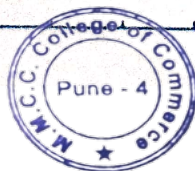

Capital Account Balance:

Capital account shows the change in country's assets abroad and the change in foreign assets in the country. The components of capital account are investments (physical as well as financial), borrowing or lending of foreign capital, etc. Borrowings of the country and investments by foreigners represent capital inflow (credit) while lending and investments abroad represent outflow (debit) of capital. The net value of these credits and debits of assets is known as the balance on capital account. If $\text{credit} > \text{debit}$, there will be a surplus and if $\text{credit} < \text{debit}$, there will be a deficit in the capital account.

③

Official Reserve / Settlement Account:

It shows the change in a country's official reserve assets and the change in foreign official assets in the country's during a year. Official reserve assets include the gold holdings of the nation's monetary authorities, special drawing rights (SDR), holdings of its convertible foreign currencies and its net position in the IMF. Increase in a nation's official reserve assets are debits while increase in foreign official assets in the nation are credits.

Causes of unfavourable balance of payment:

① Export of primary products:

Developing country exports are based on mainly primary products. The price elasticity of demand for primary products is inelastic. Their demand cannot be increased by lowering price. Reliance on primary products for export leads to unfavourable balance of payments.

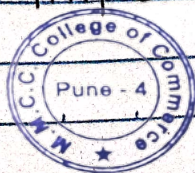

The present scenario of India's trade is gradually changing and the country is trying to shift its exports to the manufacturing sector.

② Low Levels of Machine and Technology:

Developing countries mostly rely on low levels of technology and machinery in production. For using better technology they have to spend scarce foreign reserve on importing them. If they use low levels of technology, the quality of their products will definitely be low and demand for their products in the international market will be less. This also causes unfavourable balance of payments.

③ Import of finished goods and export of raw materials:

Developing countries heavily rely on import of finished goods and export raw materials. The cost of importing finished goods is much higher than the receipts on exporting raw materials causing unfavourable balance of payments for most of the developing countries.

④ Excessive Reliance of on Foreign Funds:
Developing countries generally finance their development projects through heavy foreign borrowing. The interest burden of such loans is very high. For the repayment of such loans along with interests, many of them have to take the help of foreign borrowing again. This may cause a deficit in the balance of payments.

⑤ Susceptibility to Natural calamities:
Agricultural activities in many developing countries are dependent on good monsoon. If there is any irregularity in it like heavy rainfall, flood, draught, etc. agricultural products are destroyed and these countries will have to be heavily dependent on imports of such products.

⑥ Preference towards Foreign Goods:
If there is change in tastes for domestic products and people start demanding foreign products, import bill will increase causing unfavourable balance of payments.
